A historic and vibrant quarter

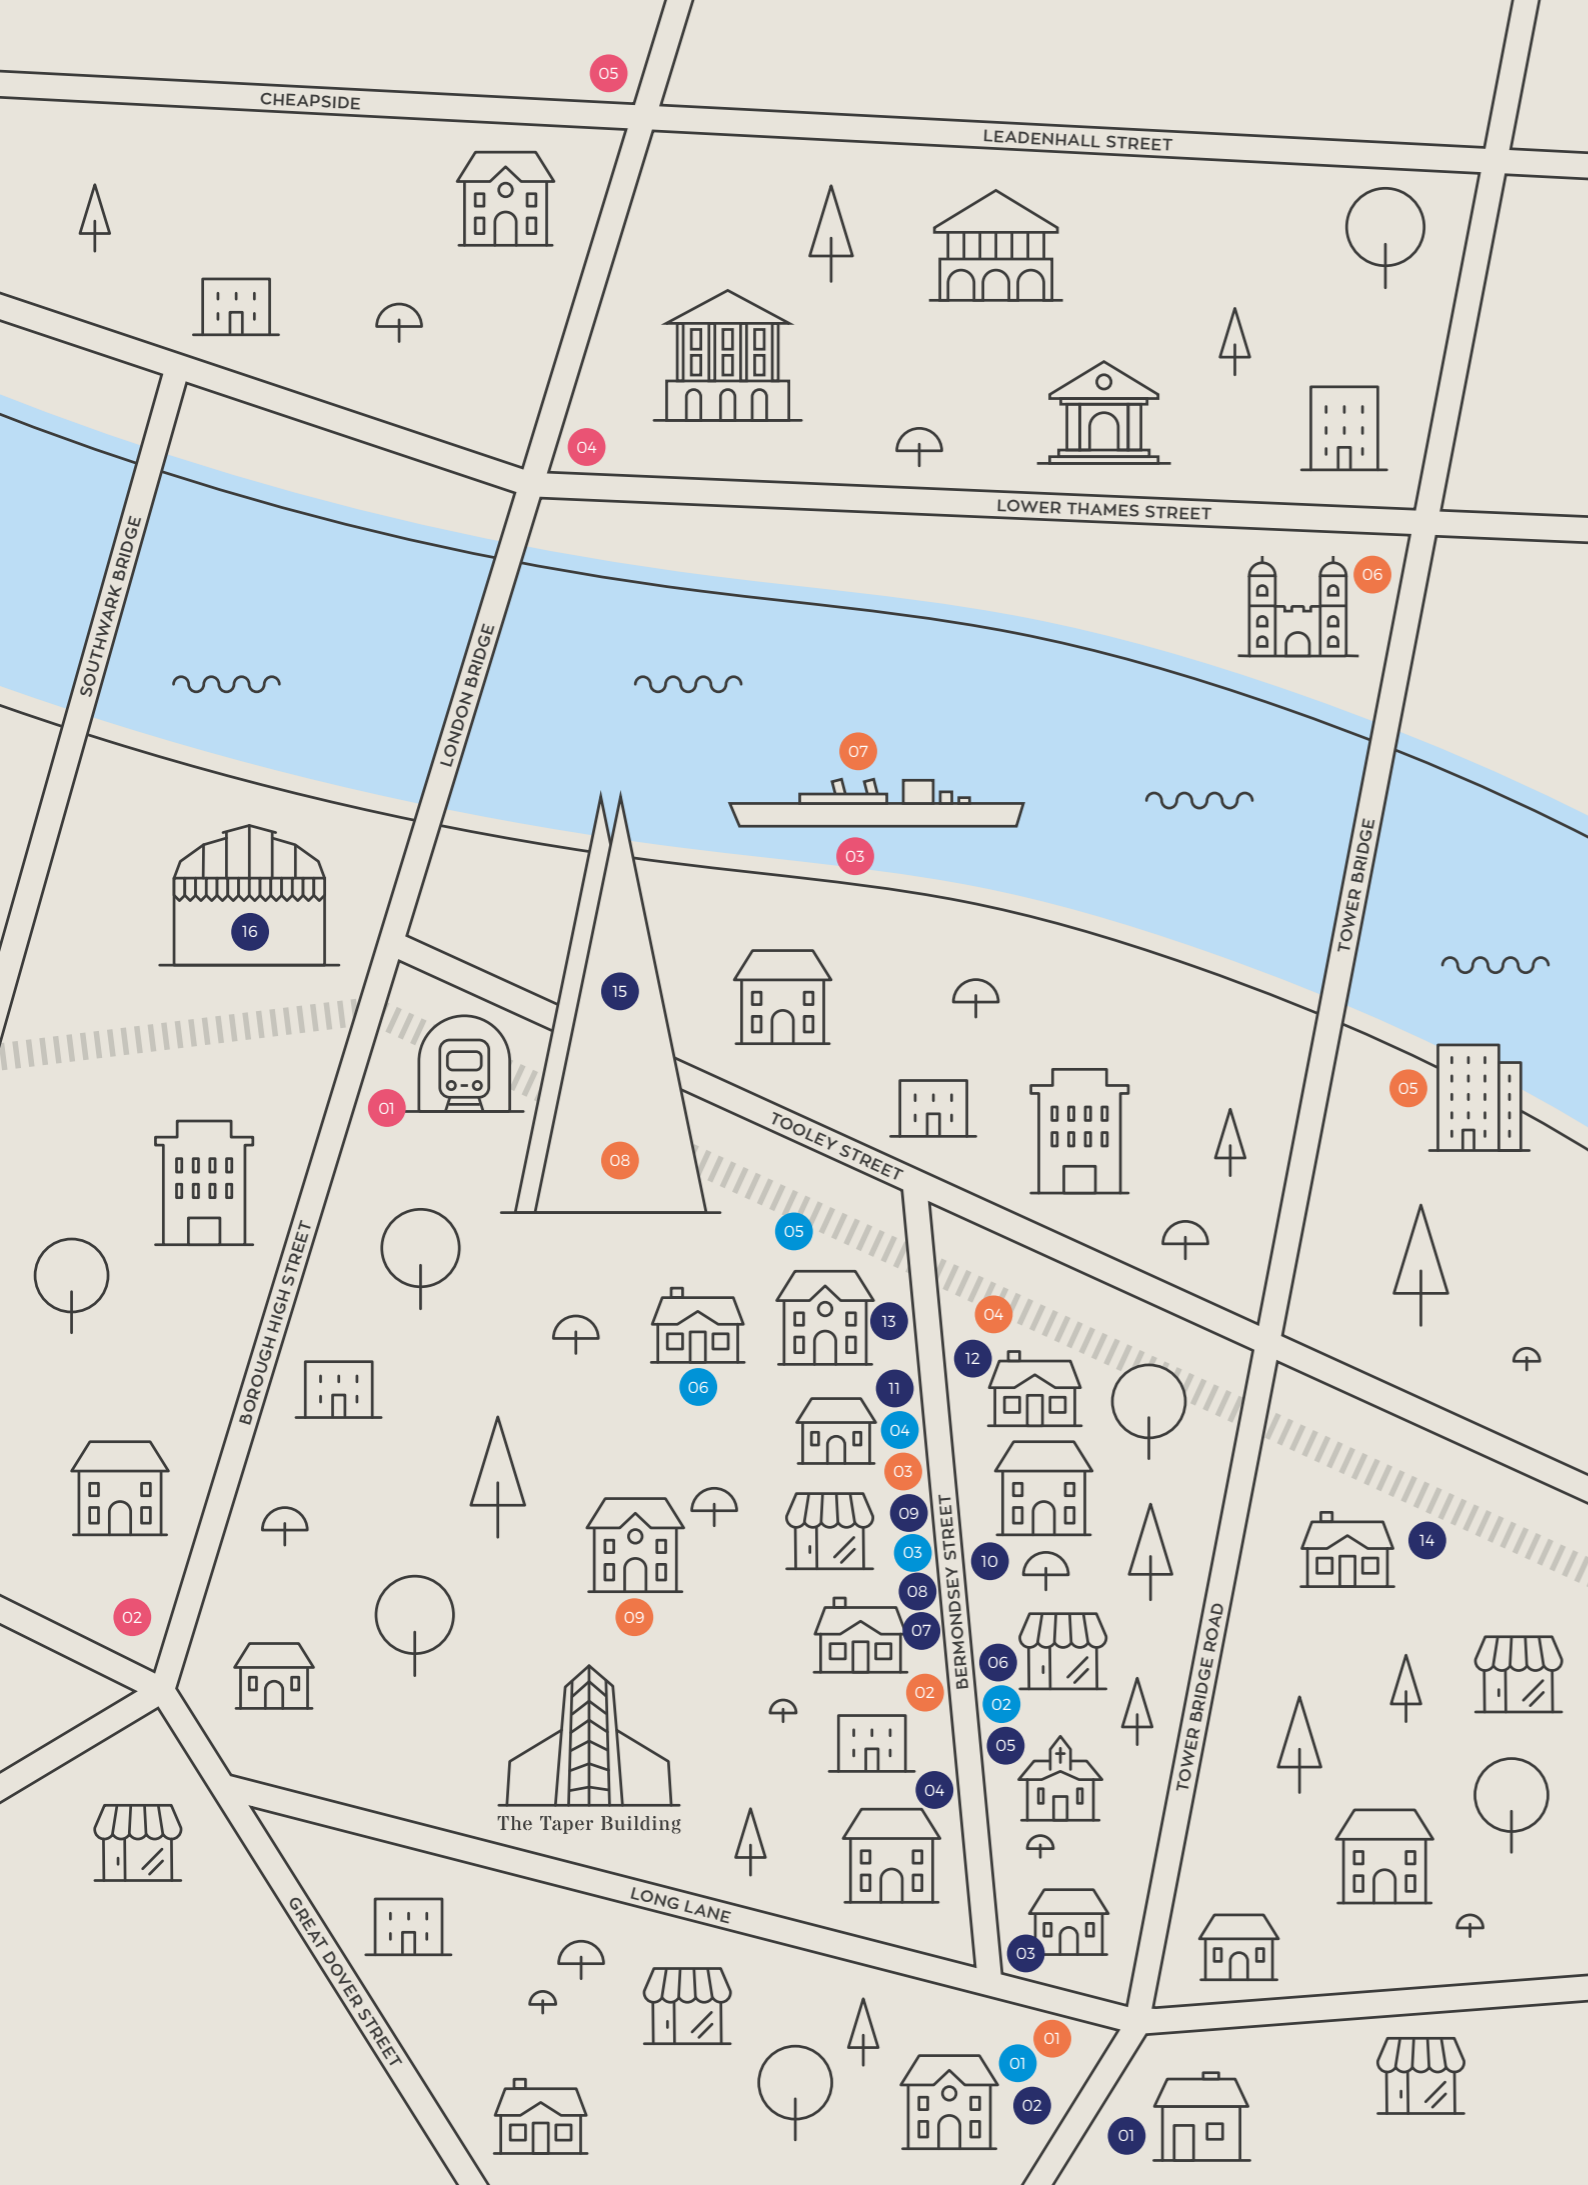

SE1 has a rich industrial history that stretches back to medieval times. The riverside location was once an important hub with leather and textiles the key trades, together with food processing. Peek Frean Co's biscuits, Sarson's vinegar and Hartley's jam were once produced here, with locals naming the area 'London's Larder'.

By the 1960s most of these factories had closed and the warehouses and wharves stood quietly until the 1980s when developers reignited the area by converting them into offices and apartments.

Although the years have brought many changes, the lively community spirit of this neighbourhood has remained and you'll find it everywhere, from the converted warehouses, and hidden railway arches to the modern buildings and quirky boutiques.

SE1 residents take their brunching and lunching seriously so there are plenty of places to whet your appetite.

A visit to José Tapas Bar is a must — it's a small and cosy tapas bar with a menu that changes daily based on what looks good at the market. Make sure you try the exquisite croquetas and moreish Padron peppers.

Leisurely lunchers can fill their boots with Tanner & Co's 'Bottomless Brunch'. The quirky restaurant is decorated like a school gymnasium and takes an old school approach to quality food and dining.

For pub grub look no further than The Woolpack. Known affectionately as 'the woolly' this friendly local boozer serves traditional pub fare, which you can enjoy in their charming beer garden.

B Street Deli
88 Bermondsey Street

Brewed in SE1

Locals love B Street Deli for its eclectic range of produce, relaxed atmosphere and community spirit.

A typical day brings coffee aficionados who browse the stacks of newspapers while enjoying delicious Volcano coffee — a small coffee company that hand-roasts their beans using carefully restored vintage roasters. Food lovers can graze the deli, which is packed with Spanish and Italian charcuterie, artisan cheeses, and fresh bread and pastries from the local markets.

If you need to grab something on the go there are sandwiches stacked high or Simon and his team will make up a hamper and deliver to your door.

In the evenings the café transforms into a Parisian style wine bar, and the mood relaxes as people gather to share platters and chatter over glasses of fine wine.

By night

There's no shortage of food, drink and entertainment in SE1 and at night it comes alive with the babbling sound of conversations, laughter and glasses clinking.

With London enjoying a gin revival there's no better place for pre-dinner drinks than 214 Bermondsey. The secret speakeasy bar serves more than 80 gins and a delicious array of cocktails.

Next stop is The Garrison. The renovated gastropub, with its vintage, up-styled furniture and décor, is a Bermondsey institution, having grown up with the surrounding neighbourhood. Try their freshly made Devon crab risotto or the crispy pork belly with celeriac remoulade.

Round off your evening with a nightcap at The Hide bar, another staple of Bermondsey Street, tucked away beneath the International Wine & Spirit Centre. Boasting great wines, local brews and some of London's best cocktails, it's not to be missed.

Surround yourself in creativity

SE1 is a thriving creative hub and is rammed to the rafters with art studios, galleries and world-class independent venues.

Movie buffs will love the independent Shortwave Cinema on Bermondsey Square, with its retro movie house interior, intimate 52-seat theatre and art house films.

If fashion is more your style then take a stroll to the Fashion and Textile Museum. Founded by iconic British designer Zandra Rhodes, the museum celebrates the fashion and textile industries and the leather and wool merchants who once traded in the area.

And if art is your thing then you're in luck. White Cube is considered to be the largest commercial art space in Europe and has featured work from Tracey Emin, Chuck Close and the largest presentation of Anselm Kiefer's work ever staged in London.

THE HEAT & MAGIC OF AN ANCIENT CRAFT

London Glassblowing Workshop
62-66 Bermondsey St

Colour, form and texture

One of Europe's leading glassmaking workshops, London Glassblowing has a particular flair for the use of colour, form and texture. The Bermondsey area has been its home for 40 years, making it the oldest hot glass studio in the UK.

The gallery showcases the best talent from the UK and beyond and the pieces are available to buy. Leisurely viewing is also encouraged and you can experience the heat and magic of glassblowing as you watch the artists crafting their pieces — often pausing to explain what they are doing. If you're looking for a unique finishing touch to your apartment, and want to watch the artist create it, this is the best place in town.

Shopping

Bermondsey Street is abuzz with independent boutiques that cater for everything from clothing for discerning fashionistas of all ages to customised collars for the most pampered of pooches.

You'll find beautiful creations from local and independent artists and designers in Bermondsey Fayre, which also has a gallery and a yoga studio. And Alex Monroe's handmade jewellery makes the perfect gift for that special someone in your life.

And it's not just artisan tastes that are catered for. You'll find everyday basics at the nearby groceries, delis and supermarkets.

Market eats & treats

Dating back to the thirteenth century, Borough Market is London's oldest and busiest market. It's popularity with discerning foodies means that the area continues to be known as 'London's larder'.

The traders sell all manner of fruits, vegetables, fish, game, preserves, cheeses, breads and wines, while the pop-up lunch stalls cater for all cuisines from simple sandwiches to lip-smacking, spicy curries. The market is very busy at weekends, but locals avoid the crowds by going early.

For a quieter experience there's Maltby Street Market. Vendors line the short street and cram beneath its railway arches to sell some of the finest market fare around. Top treats include the unmissable salt beef sandwich at Monty's Deli, Irene's handmade Taiwanese Dhan waffles and the award-winning peri peri sauce at African Volcano.

The new London Bridge

Living here means you'll be well connected thanks to the excellent rail and bus links at London Bridge station.

The fourth busiest station in the capital has undergone an enormous regeneration. When it re-opens fully in 2018 journeys will be faster, there'll be less crowding on platforms and fewer delays, and you'll be able to reach new destinations including Peterborough and Cambridge.

Access to the station will be easier, with more entrances and a new concourse - the size of the pitch at Wembley Stadium - which will connect the whole station for the first time.
